

November 2, 2016 – January 27, 2017 Open hours: Tuesday – Friday, 12 – 6 pm

The Animal Mirror presents artworks that take non-human animals as their subject matter, reflecting a range of cultural and societal issues of the twenty-first century. From cave paintings to Joseph Beuys's coyote performances to Richard Serra's live animal habitat, art has helped us to enter into the realm of animal life and, in doing so, raised fundamental questions about what it means to be a human being. It is especially urgent to rethink our relationship to non-human animals in the Anthropocene era, when humanity's survival hinges on a more holistic interaction with the world.

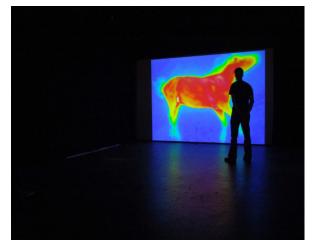

The only histories of non-human animals are written from humancentric world views. In pre-modernity, animals occupied a central role in society, pervading all aspects of everyday life for humans. Leading up to the industrial age, animals were seen as a source for labor, while post-modernity has an increasingly commodity-driven relationship to them. The idea of the non-human animal in contemporary times is changing quickly, impacting politics, economics and ecology. Animal studies, an emerging interdisciplinary field, reevaluates other species and human exceptionalism in the context of postcolonialism and otherness, gender studies, post-humanism and ecocriticism. Looking at non-human animals in non-anthropocentric ways emboldens the consideration of all animal species on equal footing to humanity.

The participating artists portray animality as more complex than a simplistic human/non-human binary. Pointing to the ever-shifting relationships between humankind and other species, they question various facets of human subjectivity. Together, they investigate the boundaries between the human and non-human and the interdependence of all life forms.

Artists in the exhibition include Kristina Buch, Marcus Coates, Petra Feriancová, Yona Friedman, Terike Haapoja, Anna Jermolaewa, Maartje Korstanje, Agnieszka Kurant, Wesley Meuris and Shimabuku.

The exhibition is curated by Kari Conte, Director of Programs and Exhibitions. It is installed in ISCP's second floor gallery and first floor project space, and offsite at Olive Street Garden (corner of Olive and Powers Streets, Brooklyn, New York).

The Animal Mirror will be accompanied by a publication designed by Other Means that combines documentation, images, and supporting texts from the exhibition as well as a second group exhibition Aqueous Earth, which took place at ISCP from October 2015 – January 2016. Aqueous Earth presented artwork that reconsiders humanity's relationship to bodies of water in the Anthropocene era.

TERIKE HAAPOJA AND STEVEN WISE IN CONVERSATION November 29, 2016 6:30 PM

President and founder of the Nonhuman Rights Project Steven M. Wise will be in conversation with participating artist Terike Haapoja.

In a 2015 court case that became a rallying point in the ongoing conversation surrounding so-called nonhuman rights, Wise served as the legal representative for a pair of chimpanzees held in captivity at Stony Brook University. Wise argued that the chimpanzees should have the same basic rights to freedom from imprisonment that humans do. Wise and Haapoja will discuss the case and recent developments in the nonhuman rights movement as well as Haapoja's art practice that often considers nonhuman legal personhood.

LECTURE BY KRISTINA BUCH December 6, 2016 6:30 PM

In a lecture, Kristina Buch will address her piece "One of the things that baffles me about you is that you remain unmurdered." (2012–16).

SIMONE FORTI PERFORMS SLEEP WALKERS / ZOO MANTRAS December 20, 2016 6:30 PM

Simone Forti will mark the 50th anniversary of her seminal work Sleep Walkers / Zoo Mantras with its first performance in New York since the 1970s.

Forti first performed the piece under the title Zoo Mantras in a 1968 solo event at Galleria L'Attico in Rome after spending many intense days observing animals in the Rome Zoo. Described by Forti as an "immersion in the kinesthetic sense," the choreography is based on the zoo animals' habitual movements and wrestles with the complexity of humans' intuitive identification with animal life.

The performance will be followed by a conversation between Simone Forti and exhibition curator Kari Conte.
