The International Studio & Curatorial Program announces La Austral, S.A. de C.V., a project by Pablo Helguera at El Museo de Los Sures.

La Austral is a socially engaged project consisting in transforming the space of El Museo de Los Sures into a “storytelling dispensary,” a place where visitors can access a range of stories provided live by a facilitator.

Inspired in part by the current plight of the individuals affected by the proposed elimination of the DACA program (Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals), known as “Dreamers,” Helguera trained a group of young immigrants to the United States to perform as facilitators in this project.

La Austral, S.A. de C.V. was developed out of Helguera’s interest in creating a cultural and social place for the public. “Austral” refers to the Spanish for “south,” as well as the prominent Spanish book publisher, Austral. “Sociedad anónima de capital variable,” or S. A. de C.V., which translates to “anonymous society of variable capital,” is typically used to describe independent businesses in Mexico. In this new context, the terms “anonymous society” and “variable capital,” seek to transcend the original legal and economic meaning of the words. Storytelling is a form Helguera has used in numerous works, including The Seven Bridges of Königsberg, 2008, Forever and Today, New York; Nuevo Romancero Nuevomejicano, 2014, SITE Santa Fe, and The Parable Conference, 2014, BAM, New York.

La Austral, S.A. de C.V. will include a storytelling workshop at The 8th Floor on March 7, 6–8pm led by Theatre of the Oppressed NYC, made possible by The Shelley & Donald Rubin Foundation. RSVP required as space is limited to 20 participants with priority given to DACA recipient. RSVP at media@sdrubin.org.
